JURY FINDS FRYBERGER GUILTY AS "ACCESSORY AFTER THE FACT"

COUNTY G. O. P. BOOSTS FISHER FOR GOVERNOR

FOOD IS EXEMPT FROM PROPOSED SALES TAX

House Committee Will Not Approve Sales Tax
On Coffee, Tea, Sugar
To Pay Soldier Bonus.

AGAINST FOOD TAX

Washington, D. C., Feb. 23.—Coffee, tea and sugar, with other foods, will be exempt from the sales tax by which it is planned to raise cash for the soldier bonus. The House Ways and Means Republican Sub-Committee has already decided against a tax on coffee, tea and sugar, as recommended secretly by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. It leaked out today. The majority of the committee is against any food being taxed as that would hit the poor man's pocket.

FOREIGN DEBT JOB PUT UP TO FIVE MEN BY THE PRESIDENT

Washington, Feb. 22.—President Harding has sent to the Senate the names of five men to be considered for the job of Secretary of the Treasury. The names are: Mr. Charles M. Hughes, Secretary of State; Mr. Hughes, Secretary of Commerce; Mr. Hoover, Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah and Representative Burton, Republican, Ohio to be members of the Foreign Debt Refunding Commission.

Upon confirmation of the nominations it is expected foreign debt negotiations will be informed this country is prepared to begin negotiations for funding the eleven billion dollar Allied debt.

According to high officials negotiations will probably begin first with Great Britain looking to the funding of the five billion dollar debt owed to the nation and with the other foreign governments in the order of the size of their debts. Under the Congressional authority creating the commissions, the amounts due from the foreign nations may not be funded for longer than twenty-five years or at interest of less than 4% per cent.

GLASS CASKET CORP. SUED BY A FORMER AGENT FOR $10,000

Altoona, Pa., Feb. 22.—As the result of a suit filed yesterday afternoon with the Blair County Court the Glass Casket Corporation was made defendant in a suit brought by foreign attachment by Charles M. Kelly, former Altoona newspaper man who seeks to recover $10,000 alleged due him for his efforts on behalf of the company in getting the corporation started and securing sites and the like.

Mr. Kelly is now a resident of Washington, D. C. and was formerly editor of the old Altoona Times. The suit was instituted here through the claimant's counsel, Attorney Thomas H. Greedy.

While the suit was formally placed on trial yesterday a detailed statement of claim totaling $10,000 is to be submitted within a day or so, according to Kelley's counsel.

Bail in the sum of $20,000 has been asked of the defendant, this sum being required as double the amount involved in the claim. The Glass Casket Corporation whose plant is now located at Beale Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street is chartered under the laws of the State of Delaware.

FORMER TREASURER OF U. S. INVOLVED IN SUSPENSION OF BROKERAGE HOUSE

New York, N. Y., Feb. 23.—The brokerage firm of Kardos Burke, in which a twenty-six year old Hungarian immigrant and John Burke, former Treasurer of the United States were partners, is in the hands of a Federal receiver. The liabilities were given as $1,500,000. These are said to have declined upon further investigation to $700,000. The assets are $150,000. The firm has branches in Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Philadelphia and other cities. Burke said he has lost every dollar he had. He confessed ignorance of the affairs of the brokerage house and said he did not think it had been conducted as a "bucket shop."

BROPHY ISSUES CALL FOR CONVENTION AT DUBOIS MARCH 7

Delegates Representing
40,000 Miners In This District Will Meet To Talk Wage Problems.

TO PLAN COURSE

DuBois, Pa., Feb. 23.—Notices have been issued by the officers of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America for the bi-annual convention, called to meet in this city on March 7, John Brophy, president, announced yesterday. The sessions will be held in the Avenue Theatre.

The convention will be of unusual interest in view of the fact that the wage scale will be up for discussion. In view of the fact that thus far International president, John L. Lewis has been unable to secure any joint conference between the operators and the mine officials of the central competitive field, it is rather difficult to state just what will be done along the line of formulating a wage scale for the district. As a rule the district wage scales are formulated after the interstate wage conferences as which is fixed a basic wage. In the absence of any basic wage, it is somewhat difficult to state what would be the action of the district delegates.

Undoubtedly the wage scale will come up for discussion as will the general policy of the district. The convention will also hear the annual reports of the officers.

District No. 2 embraces one of the largest districts in the central field there being a membership of over 40,000, according to latest reports, and upon the action of the district to a large degree hinges whether or not there will be a strike after April 1st at which time the scale contract expires.

HERE'S A MOTHER- IN-LAW WHO TOOK A WISE COURSE

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 23.—The "death mystery" of Mrs. E. S. Cheatham, wealthy New York widow, was solved today when she was found in Chicago. Mrs. Cheatham disappeared last summer, her clothes found in a Coney Island locker were the only traces left. Love for her daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Mayo, wife of Roy A. Mayo, was given as the cause of the disappearance. "Roy started suit for divorce in which he alleged 'too much mother-in-law,'" said Mrs. Cheatham, "and I vanished to make things easier for my daughter."

Republicans Gather In Masse To Make Request That Fisher Will Be Named For Governor

Special Train From DuBois Brings Hundreds Of Loyal Rooters To Meeting—All Incoming
Trains Filled With Ardent Admirers Of The Popular Banking Commissioner Of Penna.

MASS MEETING HELD AT THE DRIGGS

Clearfield county citizens today carried out one of the greatest political demonstrations ever witnessed in this city, when hundreds of them gathered here to join the booster meeting for John S. Fisher, State Banking Commissioner of Pennsylvania, as their candidate for Governor. In enthusiasm and earnestness there could have been no greater evidence of the esteem in which this popular citizen of the commonwealth is held by his friends, neighbors and admirers. Every incoming train brought delegations from the outlying districts, and a special train carrying hundreds from the DuBois region rolled into Clearfield early this noon, with Fisher badges, buttons and banners in evidence. The special train was met by a large reception committee and the American Legion Band and the long procession wended its way jubilantly to the Driggs Theatre, where speakers extolled the qualities which Mr. Fisher possessed, which they believe will fit him so admirably to be this Commonwealth's next Governor.

The climax of the meeting came after the speaking with the formation of a permanent Fisher organization, headed by P. T. Davis, Chairman, with Howard Stewart, Secretary, and W. G. Brown, Treasurer, and a pronounced determination to urge on the state leaders the candidacy of Mr. Fisher. In support of this determination a resolution was passed with resounding cheers, the text of which is printed in the adjoining column.

Today's mass meeting held to urge the candidacy of John S. Fisher, both on him and on the citizens of the state, came as a result of a rapidly crystallizing sentiment which has been rolled up since the first of the year when gubernatorial possibilities were first being canvassed. Mr. Fisher's name was first suggested by men prominent in the affairs of the state and the Republican party who recognized that none but the highest type of citizen and most capable executive should be given a nomination. The suggestion took root in various parts of the state and in every locality there is to be found ardent groups of citizens who believe Mr. Fisher is just that man. Already Jefferson, Indiana, Cameron and Armstrong county citizens have heartily endorsed Mr. Fisher and he is conceded to be the strongest candidate in the entire western part of the state. There are also signs of his strength breaking in the eastern part of the state.

Fisher Boom Travels East
Despite the fact that the afternoon of a working day was selected by Clearfield County enthusiasts to stage a rally in favor of John S. Fisher for Governor, the Driggs Theatre was filled to its capacity this afternoon. Men of all walks of life. Democrats, Republicans, Mine Owners, Mine Workers, Manufacturers, Railroad men, Bankers, Preachers and Housewives joined in making one of the largest political rallies Clearfield county has ever witnessed.

Petitions bearing the names of hundreds of voters, both Democrats and Republicans, were turned in at the meeting. It was not a case of the petition seeking the voter, but as it was known that there was a Fisher petition in the field the voters without regard to party, sought the petition.

Fisher rallies have already been held in Indiana, Armstrong, Jefferson and Clearfield counties. With each meeting the sentiment has increased. It is rumored that a large Fisher meeting will shortly be held in both Center and Blair counties. The sentiment seems to be that a business man of Mr. Fisher's ability is needed to revise the finances of the State and to protect the taxpayer from the various forms of extravagance which under the present system are so apparent.

Senator Fisher was eulogized as "a fearless exponent of right doing in political affairs." The meeting adopted resolutions demanding that Commissioner Fisher announce his candidacy, and perfected a permanent organization that will be prepared to take up the Fisher cause in Clearfield County as soon as Commissioner Fisher formally announces himself.

Edward T. Kelley, Esq., as Chairman of the Reception Committee, called the meeting to order. Nomination for a permanent chairman was called for and Alfred M. Liveright, Esq., was elected.

RESOLUTION URGING MR. FISHER TO BE A CANDIDATE

WHEREAS: The people of Pennsylvania are patiently awaiting completion of the readjustment period. Business revival means resumption of work in the vast mining section of the Alleghenies.

Taxation enters into the cost of production and the cost of management. It falls directly upon the working man and indirectly it affects him by its effect upon the industry in which he labors. If Pennsylvania business is handicapped in competition by excessive state taxation such handicap hurts the working man doubly, by direct levy and by loss of the opportunity to produce products with consequent loss of wages.

The election of the next Governor of Pennsylvania therefore, is of vital concern to every business and working man. They should see to it that the next Governor is one who will keep taxation to a minimum so that Pennsylvania's industries will be the foremost and most successful competitors for business.

Clearfield County produces the fuel that lights the fire of industry. Its people are vitally interested in prosperity.

We believe, therefore, that the next Governor should be one intimately acquainted with its industrial conditions. We would be particularly glad if, by reason of his residence, he was familiar with conditions in Western Pennsylvania.

We have carefully considered the qualifications of several of those mentioned for this honor. We have concluded that John S. Fisher, of Indiana County, meets the need for a fearless, honest, capable and experienced Chief Executive.

John S. Fisher is a constructionist. He has labored unceasingly in public and private life to upbuild the community in which he was born and in which he has lived a lifetime. He was instrumental in developing the railroad facilities of the region in and surrounding Indiana County, an accomplishment that has enabled industry to thrive by bringing transportation facilities to our doors. He was one of the original advocates of a broad and comprehensive Good Roads program. His services as president of the Pennsylvania Good Roads Association will be remembered as a pioneer effort in this direction that culminated in the $50,000,000 Good Roads program now being carried out.

He has stood firmly as a constructionist in political affairs. His services as Chairman of the Capitol Investigating Commission are worthy of remark in that they show him as a fearless exponent of right doing in public office. He conducted that inquiry without fear or favor and freed the State of the influences of those who sought by public service an opportunity for private profit.

He has organized and officered financial institutions, and his long and successful experience as a lawyer has been directed to the organization and management of business enterprise. His administration of the office of Banking Commissioner has been of high order. He would be admirably fitted, therefore, to cope with the financial problems that confront the State.

The administration of our State government requires constructive and executive ability of a high order. The Chief Executive should be a man accomplished in the law, in business, in legislation and finance. We know of no one who possesses those qualifications to a greater degree than John S. Fisher—State Banking Commissioner—The man from Western Pennsylvania whom we hope to see in the Governor's Chair at Harrisburg.

CONFESSES $50,000 JEWEL ROBBERY WAS FAKE—GEMS PHONY

Long Branch, N. J., Feb. 23.—The famous $50,000 jewel robbery from Mrs. Sara Robertson at her Deal, N. J., bungalow was a fake, according to John Bailey, a twenty year old youth who today told the police that he was hired to perpetrate the alleged holdup. Bailey is under arrest charged with conspiracy. He showed the police the pistol and the bag which was supposed to contain the $50,000 in jewels but which in reality contained nothing but tissue paper.

Mrs. Howard Milligan spent the day with friends at Lumber City. Edward Hile is ill with the gripe.

UNEMPLOYMENT FIGURES IN THE STATE SHOW WINTER LEVEL IS MAINTAINED

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 23.—Unemployment has not appreciably dropped off from its winter peak, according to the report of the State Employment Bureau issued today. There have been sporadic increases and decreases in the number out of employment, but the total of 313,575 now reported out of jobs is approximately what it was at the end of January. Decreases in the number of unemployed of 4,000 at Johnstown, 1,500 at Altoona, 1,200 at McKees Rocks, and 1,000 at Pittsburgh, were balanced by increases in Scranton and Erie and the unimproved situation in Philadelphia.

MAY BE SENTENCED TWO YEARS UNDER THE CONVICTION

"Is Accessory After The Fact," Says Jury After
5 Hours Deliberation
In Fryberger Case.

TEST TO BE TRIED

"Guilty on the third count as accessory after the fact." This is the verdict returned at 9:40 P. M. yesterday in the case of Commonwealth vs. Wm. Fryberger, of Philadelphia. This conviction carried with it a sentence of two years in the penitentiary but may be less at the discretion of the Court.

Fryberger was indicted on three counts as follows: robbery, conspiracy to rob and accessory after the fact. The conviction on the last count grows out of the acceptance of a part of the robbery spoils by Fryberger which, although not admitted by him, was believed to be true by the jury.

The charge of accessory after the fact is quite similar to receiving stolen goods but no indictment could be made in this form because what ever acceptance there might have been took place in Center County. This charge of accessory after the fact would hold as it referred particularly to the crime committed in Clearfield county.

Two hours was consumed in the legal arguments and charge to the jury and the ten men and two women composing the jury wrestled with the case from 4:30 p. m. until 9:40 p. m. before reaching a verdict. The first ballot stood eight to four for conviction on all three counts, a second ballot stood nine to three for conviction on all counts and from that time until nine o'clock the jury was "hung" at ten to two for conviction. Curiously enough, the women were divided, one for and one against. At nine p. m. the jury requested instructions from the court and judge and lawyers were hastily summoned. Juror Edward Taylor of Clearfield requested particulars about the third count. Instructions were given and it then required about a half hour for a decision. The finding as before stated was in favor of the defendant on the first two counts but unfavorable on the third. A sentence of two years may be imposed. The trial of Test, an alleged accomplice, will likely take place in a day or two.

Summerfield Test, co-defendant with Wm. S. Fryberger and also charged with conspiracy and bank robbery as an outgrowth of the Kertaus bank robbery, told the story of his connection with the main actors in this tragedy in court yesterday afternoon when he was called to testify in defense of Fryberger. Test denied any knowledge of a prospective bank robbery as growing out of the combination of Test, Fryberger, Shope and Kincaide and corroborated Fryberger's story that it was a "booze deal." The men were discussing. Test had a short session on the stand and while there testified that he knew Shope for a year or more and Kincaide about three weeks before the robbery. (Said he was present at the different conferences between the four men, but did not know they were figuring on a bank robbery.)

The Famous Insurance Laws of Massachusetts

WHAT THEY ARE AND WHAT THEY MEAN TO YOU

MASSACHUSETTS LIFE INSURANCE

Massachusetts confessedly leads in all matters pertaining to the business of life insurance. It always has been foremost in defining, protecting and advancing the interests of its policyholders, and wherever anything is known about the science and practice of life insurance, its Laws and its Insurance Department are referred to and recognized as authority of the very highest order.

Massachusetts Non-Forfeiture.

Every policy issued by Massachusetts companies is protected from forfeiture by a Law of the State.

Massachusetts was the first State to enact Non-Forfeiture Life Insurance Laws. These laws have been in effect MORE THAN HALF A CENTURY. Largely because of them, no old line Massachusetts life insurance company has ever failed, re-insured or amalgamated.

Massachusetts Laws provide for the rights of the insured and the beneficiary. They make policyholders members of the Company, with a voice in the election of officers.

In a word, Massachusetts GUARANTEES the policyholder the utmost liberality as well as the utmost protection. It safeguards life insurance property at every point.

The Supremacy of Massachusetts Laws.

All the beneficial features of the Insurance Laws of other states—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Ohio, Wisconsin, etc.—are included in those of Massachusetts. But Massachusetts Laws also have many additional valuable features that apply only to the Massachusetts Companies.

The advantage to you of such protective Laws is clear, because, on account of these Laws, a policy in a Massachusetts Company is the safest and best to buy.

The Oldest Charter.

Massachusetts was the first state to grant a regular, unrestricted, independent life insurance charter—the New England Mutual's, in 1815. This is the oldest existing charter of a mutual life insurance company in America.

The Policy Contract.

In accordance with Massachusetts Law, after three premiums have been paid, the Policy gives its holder the choice of these three Non-Forfeiture Options:

- (1) To surrender the Policy for its Cash Value.
- (2) To continue it as Paid-up Insurance.
- (3) To continue it as Extended Term Insurance.

All the values are set forth in the Policy; they are guaranteed under the Law; and they are based on the American Experience Table of Mortality with three per cent interest. Finally and most important; they are equivalent to the full legal reserve; without any penalty or surrender charge.

The Policy Exceeds the Law in Liberality.

The Policy contains everything that the Law requires, and also many things that, while not required, are granted by the Company, because they extend and enrich the protective value of the Insurance. In a word, the New England Mutual's Contract carries the principle of Mutuality to its logical and absolute limit—it is the only PERFECTLY mutual policy.

For a small additional premium the Company will issue a liberal Agreement waiving premiums in case of permanent total Disability before age sixty-five.

THE NEW ENGLAND MUTUAL'S INVITATION

Relying confidently on a splendid record, which foreshadows a still more brilliant future—new insurants are invited to join a Company whose conservatism and soundness are beyond question; with the promise that their Insurance investment will be protected by a Contract unquestionably the fairest and most liberal in the world. BRINGING UP FATHER

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By "Skinney"

Railroad traffic fell off in 1921 just 23 and 4-10 per cent, as compared with 1920 and showed the biggest drop in American railroad history. Then, too, the year 1920, with which the comparison was made was none too good of itself. The freight tons carried a mile in 1921 were 104,300,000,000 less than in 1920. While hauling this terribly decreased tonnage the railroads of the country showed a total net earning of more than five hundred millions of dollars, thanks to the almost prohibitive freight and passenger rates, yet the railroad executives are clamoring and conspiring together for further slashes in the pay of the men who actually ran the railroads.

One of Bill Hoarst's hired men tells the following story of his experience at a "nut foundry," which we feel is worth repeating here and give it to you as follows:

We found a comfortable seat under a tree out in the backyard of the asylum, and the gentleman who thought he was Napoleon Bonaparte entertained me with some of his striking views.

He talked about what he hated, which somehow comes easier than talking about what one loves.

The day being Thursday, he was particularly bitter against the Ten Digits and as near as possible I will condense his reasons for his hostility to each one.

The first digit he said he hated because it was infernally egotistic. It was a type of that destructive selfishness and egotism which was the curse of our times.

"At it," he exclaimed, "narrow, thin and dry; a type of perfect isolation. I never had any use" he declared, "for Number 1."

"2," he went on, "is a squat looking thing that looks like a snail sitting on a shaving. It is so obstinate that you can never get the square root of it, and so confidently particular that it will only go into every other number."

"I don't like the looks of 3, because it seems to be always grinning. It turns its back on you and laughs. It is an insulting number. I don't understand why they call a trinity of any thing perfect. Every body knows that 3 is a crowd and the third person is always de trop."

"4 I don't like because he never puts his foot down. He always stands with one knee bent, stands on one foot like a sleeping chane. You know we dislike people for some little trait

COULD HARDLY STAND AT TIMES

Hips, Back and Legs Would Have That Tired Ache

Everett, Washington. — "For several years I have had trouble with the lower part of my back and my hips and my legs would ache with that tired ache. I could hardly stand on my feet at times. I was always able to do my work although I did not feel good. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and having heard several praise it I decided to try it. I feel first-rate at the present time. It has done wonders for me and I keep it in the house right along. I always recommend it to others who are sick and ailing." — Mrs. J. M. STEBBERT, 4032 High St., Everett, Washington.

To do any kind of work, or to play for that matter, is next to impossible if you are suffering from some form of nerve trouble. It may cause your back or your legs to ache, it may make you nervous and irritable. You may be able to keep up and around, but you do not feel good.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for women. It is especially adapted to relieve the cause of the trouble and then these annoying pains, aches and "no good" feelings disappear.

It has done this for many, many women; why not give it a fair trial now.

REPAIR WORK ON FURNITURE

rather than for weighty reasons and if 4 would ever let down his other leg and walk like other people he would not be so bad. But he seems to be always posing.

"5 always seems to me to be a kind of a dude. He wears a cap with rim turned backwards and sits on a curlicue. Besides he is so pernickety that he will only associate with himself and 10. He will not go into any other number. And that I call downright stubbornness.

"6 is a slob. That's all he is. He is nothing. He is made up of 2 and 3 and all you can call him is half a dozen. He goes through life being 12's little boy.

"7 is angular. His nose is sticking out always. He cannot be divided by anything and he divides precious few things.

"8 always reminds me of a fat woman that is laced too tightly.

"9 is the trickiest number of the lot. He is a sharper. I would not trust him around the corner. If you try to divide a number by him or multiply by him, you never can tell whether you are right or not. He is absolutely without character and not to be depended upon.

"The cipher 0 I hate because it is a nonentity. He is just nothing. He's what you call bla. He is a type of all office holders. That is to say he is nothing in himself and all he is depends on the position he occupies."

"But," I suggested, "how would the people get along without the ten digits? How could you count anything or keep any books?"

My friend rose up, an dishing me with his luminous eye, put his finger upon my chest and said, "that's it. Why count? It was counting and adding and all that sort of stuff that brought me to this place."

BY DR. HENRY VAN DYKE

Who Has Just Returned From Europe, in an Interview With Edward Thierry for NEA Service, Inc.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 23.—The war was caused in great part by a disregard of national psychology. Germany, obsessed by the Hohenzollern myth, was utterly unable to put herself in the place of other nations and understand how they felt.

A somewhat similar lack of psychological sympathy is the main thing that imperils peace at the present hour.

If the nations would only try to do unto others as they would have others do unto them at least half of the difficulties that beset Europe, and that seriously affect the United States, would melt away.

But the other half would remain and would have to be dealt with by practical measures, like those which have recently been undertaken at the Washington Conference and carried through to a success which, though not yet complete, is greater than the friends of permanent peace dared to hope at the outset.

The condition of affairs in Europe certainly is not altogether good. But it might easily be worse. The task of peace-loving nations at the present moment is to prevent that deterioration. If that can be stopped the natural forces of good which reside in humanity will gradually bring about an improvement in industry, trade, finance and all the arts of peace.

I do not believe that humanity is bankrupt, civilization shipwrecked, and the world doomed to destruction. That idea is a delusion of hysteria in minds of a certain type, shell-shocked by the war and not yet returned to normal and reasonable ways of thinking.

But the mass of people in America and even in Europe are really not like that. They enjoy their victuals and their sleep,

Chauffeurs and Statesmen

TALKS with taxicab drivers and statesmen in the countries of Europe convinced Dr. Henry Van Dyke—author, educator and former United States minister to Holland—that the world isn't going to the dogs.

Just returned from a two months trip abroad, Dr. Van Dyke has given an interview to NEA Service, Inc., in which he says that the world's troubles are chiefly moral. The remedy, he says, is sympathy between nations.

their simple pleasures and their family relations. They love their home and their country and are willing to work for them. Indeed, they would much rather work for them quietly than be shot to pieces for them. That is why they are hungry for peace.

My estimate of the situation is not official. It is simply the opinion of a private person who has knocked about the world for 70 years and been in close relations with all sorts and conditions of men.

On this visit to England and France I met the leading statesmen of both countries and heard them talk in the freedom of private intercourse. Neither France nor England is militaristic or imperialistic, whatever babblers may profess to believe to the contrary. No militaristic government in France or England could survive for a week. The people would make an end of it.

I saw a good deal also of my old friends, the taxicab drivers, and found them much improved in manners and, I hope, in morals.

I did not meet with a single pirate among them.

Of course, they growled about the price of gasoline—and with justice. But so far as I could see they played no tricks with their fares. They were as obliging and cheerful as you can expect men with a rough life to be, and they were always grateful for the small bonus added to their too low legal fare.

Let me wind up this interview in two sentences:

The chief cause of the present troubles of the world is moral—lack of thought and dullness of heart among us men.

America must help Europe, of course, but the best way in which she can do this is by helping Europe to understand and help herself; the time for dropping pennies in the hat has gone by.

RHEUMATISM AND STOMACH TROUBLE

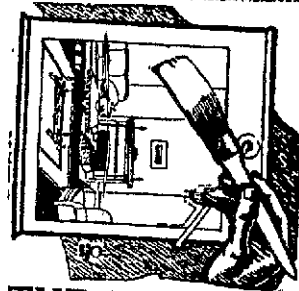

Tried Mt. Clemens and Various Remedies—No Relief

Until he used Nerv-Worth and then he reports that he got well very quickly. That is because rheumatism usually comes from disordered stomach and bowels and once you eliminate the poison from the system and restore the stomach and bowels to the normal functions the rheumatism, dizziness, headaches and other ills will disappear. That is what Mr. S. D. Hoover, of North Canton, Ohio, told a Nerv-Worth representative this great family remedy did for him. The doctors said he would have to go to a hospital for a long and expensive course of treatment which might possibly make him well. Instead of that he followed the advice of a friend and bought a bottle of Nerv-Worth for a dollar and it did him so much good he kept on using it until he was well.

Most druggists sell Nerv-Worth. You would do well to give it a trial. It is always for sale in this city at the Stewart Drug Store and every druggist is authorized to give the money back if the results from the first bottle are not encouraging. It is splendid for growing children when constipated, nervous or run down. They like its pleasant taste.

HARRIET and the PIPER

By Kathleen Norris

She Would Not Yield to Any Nursery Control Before Amy!

"I don't quite see how you can take that tone," Blondin hinted. "Do you expect to marry the boy?"

Harriet did not answer, except by a faint shrug. Her heart was sick with fright, but there was no reason why he should be informed that she had definitely broken with Ward. But he had never come so near a threat before.

"Of course I am entirely at your mercy," she said, simply. Blondin watched her for a full moment of silence before he said suddenly:

"Look here, I'll make a bargain with you. If you will consent not to make any allusion to—well, to ten years ago, I'll do the same. I'll give you my solemn promise on it. Say what you please about me now. You're under no bond to protect me. I can hold my own. But the past is dead. Neither you nor I will speak of it without agreeing to do so. How about it?"

She hesitated, the black lashes dropped, her restless hands twisting and torturing her handkerchiefs. At last, she thought, while feeling her free to oppose him.

"I'll agree," she said, finally.

"Promise?"

"Oh, I promise!" She bit her lip, and frowned, as if she would add something more. But no words came, only her troubled eyes met his fully and splendidly for a second.

Then with a brief, familiar nod she turned, and without another word went into the house.

The morning dragged. It was dry and hot, with promise of a storm later.

Madame Carter's breakfast had been sent upstairs, and Mrs. Tabor had joined her, for when the old lady sent a message to Harriet, the two women were together, in elaborate negligee, and a litter of Sunday papers was scattered about the beautiful bedroom. Upon Harriet's entrance Mrs. Tabor gracefully rose to go, but she paused for a pleasant good morning.

Alone with her determined old enemy, Harriet assumed her usual air of respectful readiness. Madame Carter had sent for her?

"Yes," said the old lady, looking steadily about her before gathering her garments together, and sinking into a chair. "I wanted you to know that the young people propose to drive to Easthampton, at about two o'clock—my granddaughter has been here, teasing Granny for the plan, and I have consented. They will dine there and be back at about—well, after dinner."

"But won't that tire you?" Harriet asked.

"Oh, I shall not do. Ward will chaperon his sister, and Nina, Amy. Mr. Blondin will see that they get home in time. It's quite all right, Miss Field; I am entirely satisfied. They—"

"But, Madame Carter!" Harriet interrupted her as she had expected to be interrupted. "Surely it would be better—"

"We won't discuss it, please, Miss Field!"

Harriet's cheeks reddened; she was silent.

"Your devotion to my son and his family is extremely praiseworthy," said Madame Carter, coldly. "But, as Mrs. Tabor, who is of course a woman of the world, and comes of a very fine family—she was a Kingston, the Charleston family—as Mrs. Tabor was saying, Richard is just the sort of chivalrous, splendid man who is perfectly helpless in his own house!"

Harriet smiled, with a touch of scorn.

"When Mr. Carter is dissatisfied with me, Madame Carter, I shall of course consider myself—dismissed. But until that time I am very glad to make his own house comfortable for him."

The hard, angry color of old age had been rising in Madame Carter's face during this speech, and now she was quite obviously enraged.

"You are hardly in a position to dictate to me in this matter!" she said, shaking. Harriet watched her gravely as she rose from her chair, made a few restless turns about the room, opened and shut bureau drawers, dropped and plucked up handkerchiefs and newspapers. In a dead silence the girl asked:

"Was that all?"

A sort of snarl was the answer. Harriet sighed as she entered her own suite to find Nina and Amy complementing themselves for the afternoon's run.

"We're going to Easthampton, Miss Harriet; Granny said it was all right," Nina said, in great spirits. "I know you won't feel hurt, because the car simply won't accommodate more than five, and it's too long a run to sit on laps—"

"But, dearie child," Harriet said, in her friendliest manner, "I don't believe you had better do that! You're all pretty young, in case anything occurred—"

A malicious line marked Nina's face.

She, Harriet, was quick to realize, placed her in a peculiar position, made difficult by Richard's kindly championing no less than his mother's hostility, by the adoring sympathy of the servants, and the affectionate familiarity of the Carter children. Richard's friends took their cue from him, as was natural, and in the first early winter dinner parties at Crowlands Harriet could not but sparkle and lead; she had reached her own level at last.

A sense of well-being and happiness began to envelop Richard Carter for the first time in many years. He was conscious of a desire to express his appreciation to Miss Field. It was natural that this should take the form of a check. She had a sister who was not rich; she would like to go home with her hands full. But the question was, how much?

He was musing over this very point and other matters of deeper moment one morning when Harriet herself came in. She returned his smile with her usual bright nod, but he thought she looked pale and troubled.

"Mr. Carter," she said, bravely going to the point, "do you think Nina is able, with your mother's help, to manage your house?"

Richard looked at her silently for perhaps two minutes. Then he said, quietly:

"Mr. Blondin, eh?"

The girl looked bewildered. "My mother has given me a hint, indeed I've seen, that he would want to take you away from us!" Richard said.

Harriet, without any show of emotion, looked down, and was silent in her turn. But it was not, he saw with surprise, the silence of confusion. On the contrary, she seemed simply a little thoughtful and puzzled.

"Mr. Carter," she said presently, "I have reason to believe that Mr. Blondin would be a very bad husband for Nina. I had no scruple in—diverting his thoughts. But if he was the only man in the world—and to his surprise, she slowly got to her feet, and spoke as if to herself, her eyes fixed far away—"I would sooner kill him than marry him!" she said.

Richard sat genuinely dumfounded. Her beauty, her assurance, and the cleverness with which she had managed that Blondin's allegiance should be temporarily shifted from his own daughter, held him mute. It was with the charm of watching perfect acting that he followed this extremely amusing and unexpected woman.

"I confess that I am glad to hear it!" he said, dryly.

"Nina is very angry at me," Harriet said. "Well, I have to stand that!"

And she gave Nina's father a whimsical and friendly look.

"But what then?" Richard asked. Harriet immediately became serious again.

"But this," she said, "you know your mother is right. You're all too kind to me; I am really a member of the family. I love it. I love to dress for dinner, and order the car, and charge things to your accounts! But—it's not possible. You see that?"

Richard was quietly looking down. Now he made several parallel lines with a pencil before he looked up.

"No, I don't see that!"

"Mary—Mrs. Putnam, for instance, who is very fond of me, and Mrs. Jay. They want to ask me to dinner—to Christmas parties—and they're not quite comfortable about it. I am not a member of your family even though you are kind enough to treat me as one. I am a paid employee, and Madame Carter naturally resents their treating me as anything else. But most of all," said Harriet, seeing that she was not making headway, "it's myself. Nina, and your mother, and Mrs. Tabor—it's just a hint here and there—nothing at all! But it undermines my position. I dress, I entertain my friends, I join you in town; it makes talk. And I can't—I can't—"

She stood up and turned her back on him proudly, and he knew that she was crying.

"Just a minute," Richard said, finding himself more shaken than he would have believed. "It is—you're sure it isn't Blondin?"

"Royal Blondin! No, it's more serious," Harriet said. "It means constant irritation for your mother. It means that she is always in a state of exasperation. I think—I don't know, but I have reason to think—that she made it a choice, for Mary Putnam, between us!"

"She has no right to do that," said Richard, soberly.

"I'm not—you know that!—criticizing," Harriet said. The man sighed, and tossed a few papers on his desk.

"Sometimes I have hoped," he began, on a fresh track, "that you and the boy might fancy each other. I'm not satisfied with Ward. He needs an anchor. That would be a solution for us all!" It was a random shot, but to his surprise she flushed brightly.

"Ward knows that there is no chance of that," she said, quickly, "dearly as I love him!"

Richard's eyes widened with whimsical amusement again.

"So you've refused Ward, have you?"

"Long ago," she answered simply. The man laughed; but a moment later his face grew dark and troubled again as he said:

"I hardly know what to do! The girl is the first consideration, of course, and she needs you. I feel that she is not only safe, but happy, when you are here. I've unfortunately reached a place where I've got to feel free. You've heard us all talk of this new asbestos material, a dear girl, that will keep me going, let a stove for months, perhaps years! I want to know when I am to be home, or when I shall have to cancel it. I suppose I can't convince you how badly I need you. My mother—well, she has always taken the safe way; she can't change.

time here, I suppose, Nina running wild, Ward never home! You—you give me exactly what I want here! Good dinners, fires, hospitality, a good report from Nina and Ward; I can bring men home, I can—"

He mused, with a smile touching his fine, tired face. "In short, I wish there was some fortunate young man somewhere to make you Mrs. Smith or Jones, Miss Field, and let you come back to the Carters immediately again!"

Harriet laughed, slightly sharply immediately upon the hint.

"Unfortunately, there isn't such a man," she said. And she added, "Even a widow, sometimes, is vulnerable."

Richard smiled, but some sudden thought made the smile but an absent one, and he sat quite obviously plunged in meditation for a long minute. "Here's another suggestion, Miss Field," he said suddenly, looking up. "I don't know how this will strike you: I have occurred to me before, Gardiner hinted it—or I thought he did, and the more I think of it the more possible it seems. You are a business woman and I am a business man. You know exactly what I am, exactly what occurred in my married life, after twenty-two years. That—that sort of thing is over, of course, but there is that way of settling it, if you care to consider it."

"BIG STICK" MAY BE WIELDED ON PACIFIC PACT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 23.—Senator Lodge will appeal to President Harding in an effort to stave off possibility of reservation to the four power Pacific treaty. Lodge today prevented a vote in the Foreign Relations Committee on the Brundage reservation by announcing that he wanted to discuss reservations with President Harding. Senator Lodge has arranged to see the President on Thursday. When Senator Lodge called up the treaty in the Senate Wednesday, a motion was made by Senator France to delay action on this treaty. The motion was ruled out of order. Senator France later said he would not attempt to recommend it because there are not enough Senators here who would vote for it, but later on he said he would make the motion and predicted it would rally considerable support.

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN CHURCH NOTES

The interest is growing and so is the attendance at both the mid-week and the Sunday evening services of the Lutheran Church. Last Sunday evening, the pastor preached the second sermon of a series on "The Vow You Made" to a splendid audience even though the evening was very disagreeable. Last evening a new record was established at the mid-week or "Quiet Hour Service". There were 167 present. During the month of February, the average attendance at this service was 146. This is a record of which we feel proud but with which we are not satisfied. We are aiming to cross the 200 mark before Easter. Next Sunday evening, the pastor will preach the third sermon of the series and the theme will be "The Marriage Vow." Are you married? Then you cannot afford to miss this sermon and recall to mind the solemn vow you made when you were united to the one you professed to love and promised to love until death. Are you contemplating marriage? Then you should hear this sermon and fully understand the sacredness of the vow you are about to take. It may keep you from the divorce mill.

Ingenious Scheme Failed.
When I was in the seventh grade at school, relates a correspondent of the Chicago Journal, there were two girls I thought I was in love with, but I could not decide which one I liked best. So one day I thought I would write each a nice love letter exactly the same and I would then choose the one who answered the most favorably. But when they got their letters, each let the other know, so as to make her jealous. I wrote each again, but I got no reply at all.

JURY FINDS

Thought it was a "booze deal" and that Shope wanted a witness against a bootlegger, whom he wanted to get. He testified to having taken Shope to Fryberger's home, was present at the conference below the Pennsy station in Philadelphia and also along on the trip to Osceola and back to Mapleton Hill where the affair was again talked over. On this trip in Shope's car he rode with Shope while Fryberger and Kincaid occupied the rear seat. He said he introduced Fryberger to Shope but didn't tell Fryberger what he was wanted for; heard Fryberger, Shope and Kincaid talking about some kind of a job or deal down the railroad track, couldn't hear what was being said, went down with them through friendship for Kincaid; had a drink the day he went to Osceola; asked if he had built a barn since the robbery, said his brother had bought a shed for $5 and they erected it on his lot. Heard of the robbery the afternoon it was pulled off while riding on the street car, heard of Kincaid's arrest the day following.

A. W. Marks, Secretary of Building and Loan Association told of transacting business with Fryberger on Dec. 20th. Chester Hudson of Philadelphia was called but objection was raised to his testimony and he was withdrawn from stand.

Raymond Shope was recalled for further cross-examination and objection was made to his testimony at this time by the District Attorney and Judge Bell sustained the objection. Wm. B. Fryberger, the defendant, was recalled and asked concerning further cross-examination and the same objection was made and also to the offer by the District Attorney and his objection was sustained by the Court. He was then asked whether he had ever heard of any ing his conversation with Shope on booze holdups besides a warehouse

"BITS OF LIFE"

Photograph by David Kesson

NO ONE WILL WILLINGLY MISS IT

FIRST BIT: "The Bad Samaritan," a slice of satire snipped from slum and social crookdom of New York. The story of a thief who got in wrong through good intentions. It's a Thomas McMorrow story from the Popular Magazine.

SECOND BIT: "The Man Who Heard Everything," a comedy-drama true to life. A Smart Set gem by Walter Trumbull.

THIRD BIT: "Hop," You surely read this yarn by Hugh Wiley in the Saturday Evening Post. From San Francisco's Chinatown the characters come—strong, real-life people in a story of a Chin who wanted a son. Lon Chaney gives an unforgettable portrayal in this.

FOURTH BIT: "The Strange Adventure," and it certainly is one. Marshall Neilan wrote it himself to top off a delightful entertainment with a dandy surprise.

JORDAN'S

A LETTER ON THE BONUS

Mr. G. A. Stewart,
Editor, Progress,
Clearfield, Pa.
Dear Sir:

The question of a soldier bonus and the method of raising money to pay such a bonus is one of the questions which is uppermost in the minds of the people of the United States at this time.

This question will undoubtedly be settled in Washington by our accredited law makers and the opinions of isolated individuals will have little effect upon their decision. However, as American citizens, we are entitled to at least express our views.

It seems to me that the boys who left their jobs and the comforts of life to take up arms for their country, whether actually engaged in conflict or held in training camps until they are needed, should have all the consideration now that it is possible for their country to give them.

The average American, having had something of a financial struggle during the past year, would be justified in remonstrating against further taxation for any other purpose than to pay the soldier bonus. But if such a measure is passed the American people will pay it gladly.

The truth of the matter is, however, that the proposed soldier bonus while it totals quite a colossal sum, when it comes to the amount to be allotted to the individual ex-service man, is entirely inadequate. Two hundred dollars would be welcomed by many of the boys who are out of work, but how long would it last? I believe I am safe in estimating that it wouldn't tide over the average recruit for more than two months.

What then? Have we discharged our duty as a nation to the boys who fought for the defense of that nation by providing them funds to live for two months? Not by any means.

The cash bonus is all right as far as it goes, but what the returned soldier needs is not only this temporary relief, he needs a pay check every month, he needs employment.

It is my notion that the law makers at Washington and at every State Capitol in the United States should get busy immediately and prosecute vigorously every possible proposition for public work, such as the erection of public buildings, irrigation and forestry projects, the building of State and National Highways, or any other projects that will offer employment. Also that the government take a hand in adjusting wage disputes between employer and employee, with a view to hastening the return to normal conditions and a normal demand for skilled and unskilled labor.

Furthermore I believe it to be the duty of every employer of men at this time to give preference wherever possible to the ex-service men.

I am in favor of the bonus, I hope the boys will get it, but they will be further ahead a year from now if they can also be offered steady employment.

Very truly yours,
A. Citizen

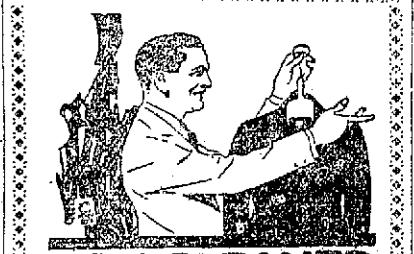

TWO KILLED WHEN AUTO HITS DITCH

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 23.—Felix Steele, aged 19, and H. B. Ramey, aged 20, were instantly killed early today and Roy Collins and A. Richards were injured when their automobile overturned into a ditch near Crawfordsville, Ark. According to word received here the party is said to have been returning from a "blow out" in the country. The car skidded and overturned in the ditch pinning the four men under it.

The Girl Proposes.

The inhabitants of Minia, in the Greek archipelago, are engaged almost entirely in sponge fishing. When a girl desires to marry she waits until she has obtained the number of sponges from the sea that corresponds with the number of years she has lived. These she places in a silk net, which she presents to the man of her choice. Should he refuse, his chances of obtaining another bride are remote, as usually the Minian maidens shun him as a punishment.

AT HOME ON STAGE ANYWHERE CRITIC SAYS OF MISS ALDA

ALDA
Madame Frances Alda, the magnetic and brilliant soprano, who will be heard here next Monday night is one of the very few singers of first rank who are equally at home on the operatic stage and the concert stage. Testifying to this, one of America's leading critics says of her:

"She has again demonstrated she is one of the few opera singers who can when need be, adapt herself to the requirements of the more restricted concert stage and make this phase of her art as convincing as the other."

Mme. Alda's winsome personality, the magnetic quality of her appeal as an entertainer, her adaptability and rare interpretative faculty as an exponent of the art histrionic, and the clarity, sweetness and all around charm of her singing, have been described by the leading musical critics of the country in glowing and varied terms.

"Mme. Alda's art has progressed steadily in recent years," says the critic of the Toronto Mail and Empire "and she now ranks among the leading prima donnas of the day. The even quality of the tone still characterizes the voice, but it has gained greatly in richness."

Madame Alda is devoting more of her time to concert work now-a-days than she has heretofore, and this without curtailing her operatic activities to any appreciable degree.

A birthday surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Grubb in honor of Mrs. Grubb's birthday. 35 guests were present. The evening was spent in dancing, games and cards. A dainty repast was served. Eury Cole entertained with fancy dancing and a cornet solo.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 37 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not irritate the bowels, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

Nothing is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They ease the bowels and liver to act naturally. They never force them to unnatural action.

It's a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull tired feeling—sick and nervous—rapid liver—constipation, and all quickly and pleasantly relieved from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.
